

DR. STEPHEN HORWITZ
Dermatologist

Q. What is new in cosmetic dermatology services?

A. "Things have never been better in cosmeceutical products," says dermatologist Dr. Stephen Horwitz. "There are incredible refinements and new products being developed." One new product is Dysport a new competitor to Botox. "Dysport is a bit less expensive than Botox and is known to work faster and last a bit longer," says Dr. Horwitz.

The FDA also just approved Sculptra as the newest facial injectible joining the ranks of Juvederm and Restylane.

Sculptra can last for up to two years and unlike the other injectibles it works by stimulating the body's own skin collagen production; however, results may be gradual.

Another area with tremendous innovation is the use of lasers for facial treatments thanks to advancements in technology. The Fotofacial Rejuvenation is non-invasive and uses pulses of visible light to improve redness, sun damage and premature aging. This procedure improves the skin quickly with minimal to no downtime.

Have health, beauty & wellness questions you would like our to send them to the editor of CRAVINGS South Florida magazine: sar